Politicians Argue Merits Of Tories As Canada's Only True National Party

Reassurance to all potential mental patients in the audience that a new National Health Plan to take care of them would soon be a reality, and ominous forebodings that the levelling off of Canada's Gross National Product (G.N.P.) would spell disaster for the government's promise of reduced taxation and increased benefits were all part of the debate held last night in the Physical Sciences Centre Auditorium.

"Resolved that the Progressive Conservatives are Canada's Only National Party" was the topic in question. On hand for the affirmative were Arthur Maloney, Q.C., M.P., and John Barton from McGill. The negative was upheld by J.W. Pickersgill, P.C., M.P., and Norm Samuels.

Presiding over the verbal fray was Dean H.N. Fieldhouse of the Faculty of Arts and Science. He was introduced by Dave Freedman, President of the McGill Debating Union.

Topic "Slanderous"

Dean Fieldhouse, in his introduction, cited the event as another example of a long and honourable tradition of public men mixing with students. Of the two student debaters, he noted that both were highly qualified for "the dirty work afoot tonight." The Dean

by Burke Doran

made no attempt to hide his partiality, and declared that the topic was preposterous and "slanderous even by Daily standards;" and that it had obviously been chosen for the sole object of irritating him.

The first speaker, Mr. Maloney, is presently the Parliamentary Assistant to the Minister of Labour in the new government. He represents the federal riding of Toronto-Parkdale. Later in the evening, he was called by Mr. Pickersgill "the brightest star that the P.C.'s have yet produced in the new parliament."

Mr. Maloney presented a wide array of facts to prove that the Progressive Conservatives were the only Canadian National party. He listed the provinces in which the Liberals were either not in power or were not an influential opposition. These were: Ontario, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Saskatchewan, B.C., and Alberta. He also noted that the Liberal Party was without a leader at present in Ontario, Quebec, and the country itself. (The opposition later said that at least they had a party in Quebec, leader or no leader.)

The fact that the Cabinet has at least one representative from each province was mentioned. Also it is the first cabinet to have a Ukrainian member, and the first to have a woman in its ranks. It is also the first party to be represented by a Chinese. Mr. Maloney stressed the relative youthfulness of the new government. He attributed failure in Quebec to its loyalty to a "favourite son" and predicted sweeping gains in the future as the son, Mr. St. Laurent, was now gone.

P.C.'s the Defendant

Next to speak was Norm Samuels, a fourth year Arts student. Samuels was declared the best negative speaker last year in the M.I.T. Invitational Tournament. He said that it was most appropriate for Mr. Maloney, a criminal lawyer, to be defending the Progressive Conservatives. He suggested that Mr. Maloney did not give up the practice of criminal law, but had just taken on his biggest client.

Samuels contended that no party could call itself truly national without the representation of Quebec. He said that this country was based on a union of two language groups, and pointed out that only nine of the 112 P.C. seats are in Quebec. Among the nine were such names as Hamilton and Pratt, which Samuels thought were not representative of the French Canadian element. In his opinion, Mr. Balcer had been "fitted in" to the new cabinet. He said that the Liberal Party was the only one in Canada today whose leadership was open to all challengers.

"That great fading figure of a past party" was the way in which Mr. St. Laurent was referred to by the second speaker of the affirmative, John Barton.

GNP Rising

Barton went on to show how the Minister of Finance's proposed policy of reduced taxes and increased benefits could and would work. Mr. Samuels had formerly stated that it was mathematically impossible. Barton, however, said that the solution was to be found in the rising Gross National Product.

Next to speak on the national character of the P.C. party was Mr. Pickersgill, who said that the new government appeared to stretch "from the Humber to the Don and from the Lakefront to Eglinton." Justifying Liberal support of the Conservatives in parliament of late, he said, "Why shouldn't the Liberals be glad to welcome the P.C.'s tardy support of the Liberal policies they are merely continuing?"

Mr. Pickersgill was especially scathing on the subject of Mr. Diefenbaker's 15% trade proposal to Great Britain. He termed it a most serious matter, "inimical to the interests of Canada."

The ex-Minister of Citizenship and Immigration closed by saying that, in his opinion, no party can call itself a national party when one-third of that nation's population has no hope of ever attaining its top post.

No winner of the debate was declared.

'Asia And West' Is Subject Of U.N. Club's Address

TREASURE VAN ONCE AGAIN P.C. Club Rallies ROLLING TOWARDS MCGILL For Parliament

McGill's annual bazaar, "The Treasure Van" will hold its opening ceremonies at 12 o'clock on Monday, December 2 in the Lounge Room of the McGill Union at 690 Sherbrooke Street West. The Van will continue each day from 10 am to 9 pm until Friday, December 6.

"The Treasure Van" is a glorified bazaar, consisting of a display and sale of international handicrafts. This display is organized by World University Service of Canada, keeping low prices, high quality, and an unlimited supply of goods in mind. The articles come from nine different countries and include Indian brass and silks, Mexican jewellery, Grecian pottery, Jordan mother of pearl, Jamaican crafts, Japanese kokeishi dolls, Malayan lithographs, and Canadian eskimo carvings.

The Van has a threefold purpose. The first is to provide funds for the international relief programme of W.U.S. — which helps build student hostels and student medical centres in Asia, Africa, Europe and the Middle East. Secondly it means to promote trade with countries rich in handicraft skills, and therefore bring before the people of Canada something of the beauty of arts and crafts of other countries. Finally it will finance W.U.S. scholarships which annually bring students to Canada.

Foreign Students

World University Service of Canada has during many years of existence: enabled over 880 overseas students to study at Canadian Universities and acquire new skills and training.

The Conservative Club at McGill will continue its election campaign today. The candidates for the forthcoming campus-wide model-parliament elections will have a chance to outline their programme in a number of meetings.

Three separate events are scheduled for one o'clock. The biggest of these will be the rally held on the Arts Building steps. At the same time, in the Law Faculty, there will take place a Round Table Discussion on the Conservative policy for Friday's elections. Also at one o'clock, the party will conduct a meeting in the Architecture Building.

Following the gatherings mentioned above, the twenty-nine candidates will converge on the Union to answer any questions. It is expected that this meeting will get underway at about 1:30 pm.

P.C. Club President Bob Amaron said that, "Steps will be taken to see that heckling does not ruin the question-period".

Socialist Society Presents Lecture On Russia & Reds

The McGill Socialist Society, following its policy of presenting a wide variety of perspectives on socialism, will have as its guest speaker on Friday, the 29th. Mr. N. Horvath, who spent some years in the USSR, some of which in a Siberian labour camp.

Mr. Horvath will discuss his impressions on the Soviet application of Marxism and also briefly describe his personal experiences in European and Asiatic Russia. Part of his thesis is that our newspapers fail to convey what is essential about the Soviet experiment. A question period will follow the talk. All students are invited.

An Ill Man And Nation

By now the shock and the sadness of the situation have subsided, and sober thought about the significance of the President's latest illness has given rise to much anxiety and doubt over the world. President Eisenhower's incapacity will do the world no good, but it is the U.S. which will suffer most.

It will reap as it has sown. In 1956 it voted for a candidate who was ill and old because he was a comfortable candidate, and because he was fortunate enough to be associated with good times for the economy. His opponent was an "egghead" but what the country wanted was Grampa Ike to lead the smiling national procession. His famous grin is now wan, and must surely mock the many millions who voted for him. A man whose leadership powers are not great has lost whatever physical powers he had. We should not believe his physicians any longer; twice their reassurances have been false. Eisenhower must resign, for his own sake and his nation's.

And if he resigns Richard Nixon will have the most important job in the world. His occupancy of the White House would be a crime against what it represents. His mediocrity is obvious. He has less of an intellect than Eisenhower has and far more political ambition and this combination is highly unpromising. As Vice-President he has done little and said little of any significance or value whatever. As President, there is no reason to suspect that he will do otherwise.

What a kettle of suckers the U.S. is in now. Madison Avenue and agencies peddled a bum product that the nation bought, and with no money-back guarantee. We are left with such leaders as Nixon and Dulles and Knowland. These are the men who lead what is supposed to be the greatest nation on the earth. These are the perverse and harsh men who can speak for the Western world. Yet the most terrible thing of all is that these are the men that Americans elected as leaders. We wonder if Americans will ever realize how badly they have chosen, how misguided they were. In a critical period of history democracy has failed tragically. Eisenhower has failed and if he is honorable must resign. But the country that has failed cannot resign. It must do something, and with what it does our country is involved irrevocably.

Corby's And The Little Boy

You have all seen the Corby ads in the streetcars. "Be Patriotic!" "Think like a Canadian!" "Take pride in your country!" "Hail Canada, the Glorious!" "Drink Corby's!" Somehow these ads are not getting across.

We were taking a walk the other day and were accosted by two children, a girl eight years old and a boy ten, who wanted to know all sorts of personal things about our background. We were in the middle of confusing them by stating that we went to shule on Saturday and church on Sunday when along comes this very pretty woman. So they pounced on her with questions, too.

"Are you French or English?" demanded the boy.

"I'm a Canadian," she answered sweetly with a very slight French-Canadian accent.

This did not satisfy the boy at all. "You're English!" he stated.

So she rattled off something at him in French.

"You're French?" he asked.

"I'm Canadian."

He didn't understand at all. Patiently she explained to him that she had been born in Canada in a perfectly bilingual community and that she had grown up speaking French and English and that French people were from France and English people from Britain and that all this made her a Canadian.

"You are not!" he said adamantly. "They don't allow girls to play hockey! They'd body check you right off the ice!"

"I am too a Canadian!"

"Aw gowan! You wouldn't know Richard if you met him face to face."

We suggest that after this debacle the Corby people stick to distilling.

Letters To The Editor

The Jobless...

Sir: This letter is directed to the rather thoughtless, misinformed gentleman who penned the editorial in Nov. 22nd's Daily entitled "The Coldest Thing in the Winter."

Before you start finding fault with our economic and social systems, I would advise you to go to your nearest unemployment office, and spend a few hours there. It is fairly obvious from your editorial that you have never been on unemployment insurance. If you had, you would never have written the ridiculous effort mentioned above.

It is true that many on relief are desperate, but they represent only a small minority. The majority cannot get their cheques fast enough before they are out the door. They do not even bother to look at the job listings.

Although we think it shameful, not everyone in our society is blessed with the ambition you and I are. There are a great many who are quite content to work for six or eight months of the year and vacation the rest. Naturally the unions make the best of the situation to help their cause.

Don't find fault with the economy of our country, blaming it for this seasonal unemployment. A little thought on your part would have brought you to the conclusion that our climate has a lot to do with it. With the construction industry forced to slow down with the advent of winter, the manufacturers who supply construction materials are faced with less demand for their products, and this is felt all the way down the line.

Next time you have a shortage of material, don't jump on our economy for a theme to a sob story.

Colin Grimson B.A. 4

(Ed. note: Mr. Grimson is quick to spot "a sob story." He is quick to condemn the "many on relief" to desperation. We ask him to remember that the economy exists for people, not people for the economy, and that if half a million people will be unemployed this winter, somebody should "jump on our economy" and hard.)

Let's Go By Stages

Sir:

In reference to your editorial, "Security or Maturity".

I'm afraid your argument is not very convincing. In your conclusion you are admitting that this is a mature generation which is precisely the criticism that is being leveled at us.

You are wrong in saying that this generation has to face greater problems than any other one. This generation has grown up in the security of the postwar world. To be sure, international crises are common, and nuclear weapons have made our world uncertain and unsafe. But I believe that today these problems are as far away from the minds of the students as we are from the moon. Students read about them and hear speeches about them so often that they have come to accept them as almost everyday happenings.

Every once in a while Montreal has a riot of some sort and gang-slayings occur in New York or Chicago. You listen, you think about them and then you forget them. There are people who are truly concerned and worried, but these are not the students.

There is a time and place for everything and to become deadly serious on one's career as soon as one enters college is too soon. Too soon because a student grows up by stages and to start with one stage and to continue never changing is not a good sign.

C'est Magnifique! Laval Plans Visit

Once again this season a delegation of about thirty-five French-speaking students from Laval University, Quebec City, will be journeying to McGill to participate in the Laval-McGill Exchange Weekend. The event has been planned for the weekend of January 31. This coincides with the University of Toronto at University of Montreal Weekend and it is expected that the four universities will be holding several combined functions.

In charge of organizing the program for this year's exchange are Bert Fulton, Chairman, and Maurice LeBlanc, Vice-Chairman. They are calling a meeting of those interested in working on the committee on Friday, November 29, at 1 pm in Room W25, Arts Building.

CAMPUS PRESIDENTS

Those Presidents of campus organizations who have not yet received a letter from the Annual, concerning their executive's picture, must pick this letter up from "George" in the Tuck Shop, not later than Friday of this week.

French-speaking students are particularly welcome, as are those with cars. It is also hoped that all the visitors can be billeted in students' homes for the three nights they will be here. This will include room only, not board.

A tentative program has been drawn up and there are many posts to be filled. It is to be emphasized that those helping in the preparations at this end of the exchange will be given priority in the selection of delegates to attend the return visit at Laval. This is a very desirable position to be in, as anyone who was chosen last year will doubtless agree.

Anyone who is unable to attend the meeting and is interested in working on the committee should contact B. Fulton at VI. 5-5089 or M. LeBlanc at CR. 2-6750.

Students' Opinions Sought In Survey

The following questions have been chosen by the Canadian University Press as the first in a series of polls aimed at finding a cross-section of student opinion across Canada. The results of the polls at all universities will be coordinated and published.

For some years now, Canadian students have been discussing the question of exchange visits with students behind the Iron and Bamboo Curtains. This year's WUSC assembly decided to make definite arrangements to invite Russian students and professors to tour Canadian Universities. The NFCUS assembly also decided to continue to send observers to the Communist-dominated IUS, as it was still the only true international student's union.

CUP QUESTION AND ANSWER FORM

Please give a simple "yes" or "no" answer and return clipping to Daily Office addressed "CUP Poll".

1) Do you feel that despite the admitted value which the communists gain by exploiting the attendance of Canadians to the IUS conference, NFCUS should continue to send observers there?

ANSWER

2) Are you in favor of exchange visits with students

a) From Russia and China?

b) From countries commonly regarded as "satellite" nations?

ANSWER

3) Are you of the opinion that there should be an attempt by students in Western democracies to foster understanding with students in Communist countries by tours even though (as the case of the visit of U.S. students to China) the government may not approve of such relations?

Redmen Edge Gaels 4-2 Braves Romp Mac 11-0

by Eric Rennert
Sports Editor

McGill hockey teams last night gained two victories in an exhibition doubleheader played at the Winter Stadium. In the opener the Intermediate Braves made their first start of the season an impressive one as they swamped MacDonald College 11-0. In the second game the Senior Redmen came from behind a 2-0 deficit to take a 4-2 verdict from the Queen's Gaels.

The Redmen started out rather slowly in their tussle, as the Gaels drew first blood at 3:42 of the first period. Freddie Morris broke away from defencemen Doug Maule to beat goalie Michel Joyal easily, picking the right hand corner for his shot.

Some eight minutes later the Kingstons hit the score sheet again as Barry Percival, who played a hard an auspicious one as his Braves completely outclassed the boys from Ste. Anne de Bellevue. Steve Molson led the Brave snipers with four goals, while veteran Gord Merritt picked up two goals and a similar number of assists. Ritch Bowie and Pete Budge each racked up a pair of goals also, and Fred Von Zubin blinked the red light once.

Billy Young in the McGill nets turned in a solid performance, and this, added to the stalwart defence play of Ed Eberts and Pat Morrow, made it difficult for the Mac men to get any clean scoring opportunities.

driving game all night, finished off a neat Queen's passing play to put the visitors ahead 2-0. The Redmen managed to break the ice shortly after when a neat pass from Leo Konyk gave Ivan Saunders an opening to the Gaels' net and the stocky right winger made no mistake.

REDMEN TAKE OVER

In the second canto, Leo Konyk put the big Red team back in command of the game as he counted two clean markers within 19 seconds midway through the period. Dickie Baltzan and Sandy Sandzelius picked up assists on each of these tallies.

Queen's skated hard throughout the final 20 minutes of play but the Redmen kept them out of scoring range, and no damage was done. The scoring was rounded out with just 16 seconds left in the game as Baltzan teamed up with Konyk and McGregor to put the Redmen ahead 4-2.

Give that man a B.Sc.

Once upon a primeval time, there lived a man of great genius. Knowing less than today's five-year-old children know, he invented the wheel. He could not have discovered it, for a wheel does not happen by accident. His was an act of pure reason, an invention: bold, imaginative, sudden. By making it, this man of genius made all things possible.

From his rough model, we have built a world of wheels. We could not now support our multi-billion population without them. This message could not have been printed. Canadian Allis-Chalmers could not supply its processing and electrical equipment to industry, and industry itself could not exist to use it. Honour then, this primitive man, for he was greater than a thousand Caesars.
